The President Signs the Exclusion Bill To-Day.

A Lengthy Message Submitted With His Approval.

The Provisions and Probable Effect of the Bill.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.] Oct. 1 .- President Cleveland signed the Chinese Exclusion bill to-

The bill was transmitted to Congress, accompanied by a long message.

The bill, which was introduced in the House by Congressman Scott, for-bids the admission of Chinese into this country, whether for business or for the purposes of travel.

It revokes all permits heretofore by which Chinese laborers on a visit to their native land are allowed to

The bill was passed both in the House and Senate by substantial majorities, but final was long delayed by the Senate to some doubt as to whether rejected the treaty by which some of the benefits of the treaty were

After the actual passage of the the Senate, Senator Sherman moved its reconsideration, and when that failed endeavored to delay its return to the officers of the House.

The basis for this action was the repeated allogation on the part of the Republicans that the Emperor of China had not rejected

If the bill had gone to the White House a this time President Cleveland would have been in some emparrassment, but on the day time President Cleveland would have the House received the completed bill positive news came of the rejection of the treaty by the Chinese Government. This has been cited as another instance of

"Cleveland luck."

Ottinger & Brother, real estate agents at 137 Broadway, have for some time missed mall sums of money from their safe, the mount being taken invariably after the safe was locked up and they had gone home for he day.

Inspector Byrnes was notified and Detec ives Heidelberg and Dolan suspected George D. Bryant, aged nineteen, of 424 East Seventy-ninth street, a trusted clerk of Ottinger Bros. An investigation of the robberies showed that on Sept. 15 a twenty-dollar gold piece was removed from the safe late in the afternoon, and later sums of money varying between $20 and $50 were stolen.

money varying between $20 and $50 were stolen.

The detectives marked a five-dollar bill with the letter L and left it in the safe. In a few days they saw Bryant enter the Ottinger office about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and when he returned saw him enter a saloon. Here he called for a drink, paid for it with a five-dollar bill, the marked decoy, and hastily departed. Bryant was arrested and taken to Police Headquarters, where he broke down and confessed. He said he made it a habit to visit the office of his late employers when he knew they had gone home for the day and only an office boy was in attendance.

He said to Detective-Sergeant Mangin: "I, wearied of a life of crime, and had fully made up my mind that I would go there no more after the day I stole the marked five-dollar bill. The last visit was the fatal one which cost me my liberty."

Bryant was taken to the Tombs this morning and was remanded by Justice Kilbreth until to-morrow.

was occupied by Joseph Connolly as a livery stable, and the upper floors were used as dwellings.

Mrs. Sprague, an elderly Frenchwoman, occupied the second floor with Mrs. Movin. She was awakenep by smoke and getting up she examined the stove in the front room.

Finding this all right, she was about to return to bed, when her attention was attracted to the reflection of fire on the ceiling. She opened the door leading to the extension, and on looking down discovered that the stable below was abiaze. She ran to the front window and called for help. A private watchman who was passing, sent in the alarm, and the engines were soon on the scene.

In the mean time the two women had been cared for by Mrs. Kemble, who lived opposite. Mrs. Movin was much excited and had to be removed by a policeman. The other tenants on the upper floors escaped to the roof and lodged themselves in No. 48. Acting Chief Shaw, who was first on the scene, appreciated the danger and sent a second alarm.

The firemen made their way into the basement where twelve horses were stalled and saved six of the number. The other six were burned. After a half hours' work the fire was got under control, and it was then discovered that the extension was entirely gone and the basement and first floor were gutted.

When Mrs. Movin returned to her rooms this morning she discovered that her watch was missing. It was an open face, 14-carat gold watch, with a bamboo chain attached. She said she left it on a table. She reported the case to the Nineteenth Precinct police, and Detectives Brett and Hayes were detailed to work on the case. The cause of the fire is unknown, and there is no insurance.

President Babcock, of the oil company, who was on the ground all the morning, says that the loss will be about $50,000.

The machinery and engines for running the six big stills are entirely wrecked, as well as two of the retorts, and several sheds and wooden tanks were destroyed.

The fire spread to an adjoining iron tank, containing about one thousand five hundred barrels of refined oil. This was burning fiercely at noon, but the firemen will prevent it from spreading, although it will have to burn itself out.

A friend of Gov. Hill, who had a long chat with him last evening, said to an Evening World reporter: "The Governor is very confident that the Democracy will carry the Empire State by a rousing majority.

"He has made a number of speeches since the Buffalo Convention, and he says that he never saw larger or more enthusia-tic gather-ings. The Governor thinks that the National and State tickets will come down to the Bronx River with 20,000 more votes than Cleveland came down there with in 1884

"He also says that the rural Democrats are solid for both the National and State tickets "The Governor is anxious to know the state of affairs in this city and Brooklyn. He does not wish to interfere in the factions feud between Tammany Hall and the County Democracy, but I am led to believe that he would not like a fight between Tammany Hall on one side and Mayor Hewitt and the Hall on one side and Mayor Hewrit and the County Democracy on the other side.

"There are other friends of the Governo who seem to think that he would not object to a hot, three-cornered local fight."

The County Democracy leaders never call on the Governor when he comes to the city. Police Justice Power, ex-Mayor Cooper and ether leaders appear to have forgotten the way to his suit of rooms.

Gov. Hill is expected at the National Democratic headquarters later in the day to consult with Col. Brice, Chairman of the Campaign Committee.

The Finks came to this country forty-five years ago, and Isaac and his sister were the only surviving children. They were devotedly attached to each other. Mrs. Marx was sixty years old at the time of her death. But her brother was fourteen years her senior and for some time has been confined to the residence of his son Esamuel, a Maiden lane jeweller, by decrepitude. Old Mrs. Marx would toil across from Brooklyn at intervals for hours of converse with him.

Last Saturday she traversed the familiar route with a breaking heart, for she came because she had heard her brother was dead. She sat by the old man's corpse, letting her because she had heard her brother was dead. She sat by the old man's corpse, letting her tears roll down upon the placid face. She remained at his residence that night, and sought in sleep nature's comfort to her taxed feelings. She found fuller measure of solace than she had hoped.

An early riser, her not appearing in the family circle the next morning led her relatives to seek her. They found has in bed, her sorrow for her dead brother soothed by that sleep whose only waking shall be on the judgment day. She had died, the doctor said, of rheumatism of the heart. A fund of $5,000,000 was raised by the syndicate for the construction of the River Division of the Ohio Central Railroad.

Messrs. Seney and Shethar were appointed a committee to spend this fund, and it is claimed that they diverted $2,000,000 in the purchase of worthless securities. Of this sum $1,250,000 went to the purchase of bonds of the old Richmond and Al agianty road, which was virtually a bank-rupt concern. Half a million was laid out on the old Ohio Central, and the balance of the $2,000,000 was used to pay old coupons of the road.

Brewing Company.

The reporter did not see the young lady, however, as he was told she would see no one and had no statement to make.

Miss Elias is the young lady whose recent elopement with Oscar Moeller, a German shopkeeper, from Cassel, Germany, created a sensation a short time ago. She arrived in this city on the Servia and was taken to her brother's house by her guardian, Edward Hamtzsch.

Mr. Hamtzsch was seen at the office of the brewery, in East Fifty-fourth street, would make no statement, other than that Mr. Untermeyer, the New York lawyer who is now in Europe on the case, would be in this city on Friday. Until he returned nothing would be said.

It was the second murder, however, which was discovered in Mitre Square, only five minutes walk from Berners street, that has filled the people of London with more horror than all the other crimes of the unknown wretch combined. Such ghastly and sickening mutilation was never seen before, and the policeman who first discovered the body fainted at the horrible sight.

The victim was lying upon her back, with her toroat cut from car to ear, the stroke, in fact, nearly severing the head from the body; the nose and the left ear shaved completely off, and the face criss-crossed with gashes from the sharp instrument in a most horrible manner, and completely defying identification.

In addition to this the clothing had been pulled up to the breast and the same razor-like knife had ripped open the abdomen with two long slashes. The intestines had been torn out by the brutal butcher and some of two long slashes. The intestines had been torn out by the brutal butcher and some of them twisted about the neck of the victim. There was blood in every direction.

There was nothing to show in what direction the murderer had retreated, or what manner of being it could be.

No steps have been taken to identify the body, except a general description which the police have issued.

There is hope that a tattoo mark of a figure "4" on her left forearm may lead to her identification.

Several vigilance committees have been organized in the Whitechapel district, and the people have resolved that if the police will not protect them they will supply the deficiency themselves.

That the end has not yet come is the universal belief. It will be recalled that when the body of the fourth victim was found in Hanburg street the fiend wrote in blood on the wall: "Fifteen before I surrender." Six lives having been taken nine more will probably be sacrificed before this monster's appetite for blood is appeased—provided the police are not successful in running him down.

Very few additional facts have been obtained. Both murders were discovered about the same time, between 1 and 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and both victims, as in the other three cases, were women of the lowest and most debauched character.
